The rise of Microsoft over the past decade has been impressive but we are starting to see a slowdown in its growth and some analysts are now predicting that Microsoft will start to lose some market share over the next few years. This is what our own Emily Taylor has to say about it: "Microsoft has been the dominant player in corporate IT for a long time now, and the fact is that businesses have historically preferred Windows to alternative operating systems, like Linux. But Microsoft has been facing challenges over the last few years. Major security breaches and the slow adoption of Windows 8 have led some businesses to consider the open source ecosystem," So where do you think Microsoft's performance should be heading in the future? Let us know in the comments below! Recommended Reading: Why The Biggest Threat To Microsoft Is Its Own Users Earlier this year, President Donald Trump's campaign sent an email to supporters asking for donations in the names of people killed by undocumented immigrants. Now, the campaign has posted the names, ages, and hometowns of the people it killed in order to raise money for those deaths. The Trump campaign released a list of all the people killed by immigrants who were in the country illegally on Saturday. The list includes 70 people, many of whom have been described by the campaign as "invaders" or "rapists." The list features the names of US citizens killed by undocumented immigrants, as well as the names of an estimated 500 people who were killed by both illegal immigrants and US citizens. The Trump campaign is now asking for $10 donations for "each of the innocent Americans lost to illegal aliens" — with a $100,000 goal overall. The campaign states that much of the money will go to the "down payment" on the proposed border wall and the effort to "stop the invasion of illegal aliens that are committing horrific crimes in the United States." The campaign also lists the age, hometown, date of death, and cause of death for each person. The cause f678ea9f9e
